THE NINTH CENSUS.

The Kanmeration Complete-The Aggregate Population of the Country 38,535,153, an Increase of 22 55 Per Cent. In Ten Years-Comparisons with the Past Population, Complete returns of the recent census from all the States and Territories have been received at the Census Bureau in Washington, by which the aggregate population of the country is shown to be 38,535,153. The revision of these returns will necessarily make some changes, but they will probably not be material enough to affect the aggregate, or the relative rank of the States.

In the following table we give the population of each State, according to the returns of 1870 and 1800, with the percentage of increase in the ten years, and the relative rank of each State at the time of the two enumerations. Three States have been admitted into the Union since the census of 1860 was taken, Nebraska and Nevada by change from a Territorial form of government, and West Virginia by the partition of Virginia. In the column of relative rank in 1860, these three States are indicated by an asterisk ("). The population of old Virginia in 1800 is divided in the table between the two States as they are now constituted, to show the actual increase in each during the decade:-

It will be noticed that two States, Maine and New Hampshire, show a slight decrease in the population as compared with 1860. This is the first time that the decennial enumeration has shown a decrease in any State, but between 1850 and 1860 New Hampshire and Vermont remained almost stationary, the increase in the former State being but 2.55 per cent., and in the latter only '31 per cent. The great strides taken by some of the Western States since 1860, and the partition of Old Virginia, have somewhat disarranged the relative rank of the States. but a number still retain the position they held

The gradual progress of the population of the entire country since the first census enumera-

Previous to 1860, the decennial increase had ranged between 32-67 per cent. and 36-45 per cent., a degree of uniformity that has been rather remarkable. During the last ten years, however, the rate of increase has fallen to 22.55 per cent., or less than two-thirds of the rate during the previous decade. If the usual rate of increase had been maintained during the past ten years, the present population of the country would have been 42,680,854, or about 4,100,-000 greater than is shown to be the case. The disturbing element of the war against the Union is to be credited with the result as it stands. and this loss of over four millions of inhabitants in ten years is not the least important legacy bequeathed to the country by the slaveholding oligarchy of the South. During the next ten years, however, we may expect to witness an increase in our aggregate population even greater than any recorded in the past

The established character of this road, running as it does through the heart of the most thickly-settled and richest portion of the great State of I wa, together with its present advanced condition and large earnings, warrant us in unhesitatingly recommending these bonds to investors as, in every respect, an undoubted security. A small quantity of the issue only remains unsold, and when the enterprise is completed, which will be this fail, an immediate advance over subscription price may be looked for. The bonds have fifty years to run, are convertible at the option of the holder into the stock of the Company at par, and the payment of the principal is provided for by a sinking fund. The convertibility privilege attached to these bonds cannot fail to cause them, at an early day, to command a market price considerably above par. U. S.
